

With inventiveness and a trained scientific mind, this great weaver has designed his way out of the slow, traditional methods which do, indeed, seem out of place in our Twentieth Century. Through research and discovery he has broadened the whole range of rug techniques. It is the sharing of these discoveries that makes this book so important. As one can easily imagine, Mr. Collingwood writes — and illustrates — with the same grace, with the same brilliant organization with which he designs and weaves.
